

ALL SMILES | "It's the best solution," Robert Rowzee says of the decision he and Elaine made to turn their basement into their master suite.

Photos by
Mary Bondarowicz
THE OREGONIAN

AFTER

Interior designer Deb Seeley's plans made full use of the basement space, wrapping a support pole in the middle of the room in wood and turning it into a bookshelf. After all, one of the goals was to provide more storage, Seeley says.

BEFORE

The large-screen TV and the comfy chairs made for fine viewing, but entertaining in the basement left a little to be desired. The white pole and the beam across the ceiling are now beautiful wood accents.

Before photos courtesy of Robert and Elaine Rowzee

